The maps below show the changes to a small town called Greenfield between 1995 and today. Summarise the information by selecting and reporting the main features, and make comparisons where relevant.

Introduction

The two maps illustrate how the town of Greenfield has changed from 1995 until the present day.

Overview

Overall, the town has become much more developed and modern. The most noticeable changes are that farmland has been replaced by housing, and that many public facilities in the south have been enlarged or upgraded.

Body paragraph 1 – The northern area
In the north of the town, there was a farm in the north-west and a small forest in the north-east in 1995. Today, the farm has disappeared and a housing estate has been built in its place. The forest has become much smaller, as part of it has been cleared to make room for a new car park, which is located next to the housing estate.

Body paragraph 2 – The southern area
In the south, the school, which stood in the south-west of the town, has been expanded to include a larger playground. In the centre, the old market has been demolished and a shopping mall has been constructed on the same site. Meanwhile, the small clinic in the south-east was moved to the north-east of the area, where it was turned into a hospital that is much bigger than before. Finally, the dirt road that ran through the middle of the town has been upgraded into a main road.
